Appomattox County Library

By Verna Conner

The following is a quote from the Library Log, May, 1941. Co-editors, Mary L. Phillips, Lunenburg and Beverly Ruffin, Nottoway County..:

"Appomattox, as usual, has so many interesting activities that we ought to dedicate a page to them. What with book reviews, birthday parties, clubs and book clinics this library sets a dizzy pace for the rest of us."

Also in this same issue is a greeting from the chairman of the Library Board of Trustees of Lunenburg County. I quote, "The duties of a library trustee relate to every matter having to do with the successful operation of a library. It is incumbent upon someone to see that a Board of Trustees acquires and retains a high degree of interest in the success of the library and that duty rests squarely on the chairman of such a board. The only incentive offered trustees of libraries such as ours, must be found by the trustees themselves in the work they do. These boards are composed of persons whose personal affairs require such attention that attendance upon board meetings and other time devoted to library affairs represents an actual sacrifice on their part."

Many questions arise as to how to judge the success of a library. Two of those in the "Log" impressed me. One was that we should have a certified librarian and the other was that we should have an enrollment of thirty percent of the residents of the county as registered borrowers.

If you are getting bored and wondering what all this had to do with our library today, just remember that what applied then, also applies today. I could not express it as well as these trained librarians of a by-gone era, hence the quotations.

We desperately need more people to become enthusiastic workers as well as readers. Our present librarians are working under difficulties of which few are aware. If you do not know the problems encountered from day to day, ask for information.

My job as substitute, since retirement in 1971 from the position of Assistant Librarian gives me the opportunity to see the amount of work done and the need for more help. For instance, while shelving children's books on the second floor, the telephone rings in the office. Down the librarian rushes only to have it stop ringing just as she gets there. The next day someone inquires, "Where in the world were you yesterday?"

Then imagine a day - and there are such days - when a big package of books arrives. Knowing that some 98, the patrons and I plead guilty, just can't wait for them to be processed, the librarian tries to do everything in one day. What a headache she has that night!

The librarian has more to do than sit at a desk and check out books. Of course the circulation of books is the main thing to be desired or rather the reading of books. Sorry I have skipped about a bit but there are so many things to be said and so little space in which to say them. More next week.

We are told that when Alexander, the conqueror of was dying, he gave orders that at his burial his hands exposed to public view that all men might see mightiest of men could take nothing with him when by death. The same lesson was taught us by Job when "Naked came I out of my mother's womb, and naked return thither." A mouthful of earth will one day cravings of the most covetous. This makes the boast pastor of the church at three millions and a half, is now as poor as the beggar passed in the street. "I would not mind dying," said farmer, "if I could take my mother with me!" but ceased to breathe he left all behind him. What folly all one's time in gathering a heap to leave it heapeth up riches, and knoweth not who shall gather How much wiser are they who seek an enduring which shall be theirs when the stars have die dust Blessed are they whose treasure is store moth cannot eat it, where care's rust cannot corrode where misfortune's thief cannot steal it.
Dear reader, eternity will soon be your dwelling you not concerned to be a possessor of wealth which you there? If you have been taught of God to know poverty, remember that Jesus Christ gives himself poverty-stricken sinners will will receive him. Having will be a peer in heaven's realm, and though you will with empty hands, yet shall you rise again to be rich makes men eternally blessed. Jesus cries, "Riches are with me; yea, durable riches and righteousness.
better than gold, yea, than fine gold; and my revenue choice silver."

The only purpose in keeping a beef cow is to produce calves. When she fails - and about 7 to 8 million U. S. beef cows do not reproduce annually - the costs are high. The cattleman not only loses income when his calf crops are smaller, but also the value of a year's feed and labor in maintaining each unproductive cow. This also makes meat costs higher for the consumer.

Cattlemen need to analyze their herds now and market those cows that did not calve. June is usually a good time to get these cattle sold. Don't give the inefficient cow a second chance. Once she does it - let her go. You'll probably never recover your losses even though she calves next year. You could hope for twins next time and thus help your situation, but fewer than 1 percent of all cows have twins; therefore the odds aren't very good.
